FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

"In those days" or "that time or hour" no one knows it...except the Father."

Dear Sisters and Brothers.

When we hear the words "In those days," or "That time or hour" we prepare ourselves for a story about the past. This is how the first and third readings of this weekend's liturgy sound. But in fact, both readings are about the future.

'Apocalyptic' is the word used to describe the kind of writing we see in today's readings. It is practically impossible for us to understand the serious meaning of this today, because (apart from science-fiction) the only apocalyptic we hear is from the lips of biblical writers, who appear to be gloating in advance over the destruction of the world.

Biblical apocalypse was written in times of persecution, to encourage the persecuted by telling them that their sufferings were foreseen by God, and that they would prevail in the end. Courage, not fear, was being promoted.

One aspect of it we can relate to readily in our day: transience. Everything is passing, everything that is living will die. In an age of immense and rapid change we cannot fail to see that everything is passing. In some parts of our minds, we would like to hold this reality away from us because it is too painful to think about. But the Scriptures tell us to think about these things. "Like a weaver you (God) have rolled up my life, you cut me off from the loom" (Isaiah 38:12). Our religion asks us to embrace death and transience, for if there is no death there is no resurrection. "If Christ has not been raised, our preaching is worthless, and so is your faith. (1 Cor 15:14). Let's take whatever assurance we can get from the apocalyptic message of today's gospel.

There is something else that apocalyptic writing can show us about ourselves: our bondage to calendars, cloaks, secular ideals, moral relativism, and lack of Godliness. A gentle Indian nun who had lived for a year in the West had finally got courage to say how she perceived us. "Western people," she said, "are always asking, 'Why?' and 'How much?' and 'What time is it?'" We want to know when something is going to happen, as if this were the heart of the matter. It is the fact that everything is coming to an end that is central, not when it happens. There is even a sense in which it is already happening every moment. Every moment my personal world, with its dream of permanence, is coming to an end. Every moment, because my world is coming to an end, I see that I cannot find security in the past but must throw myself on God's mercy, every moment.

Remember the words of St.

Francis de Sales, "We, in this life, are walking, as it were, on ice." How should we deal with the reality that one day our earthly lives will end? We deal with an uncertain future by living well every present moment. The present moment is the only time we have at our disposal. The present moment is the only time we must make choices that either help – or hinder – our efforts at preparing for eternity.

"LAY ALL YOUR CARES ABOUT THE FUTURE TRUSTINLY IN GOD'S HANDS AND LET YOURSELF BE GUIDED BY THE LORD JUST LIKE A LITTLE CHILD". ~ St Teresa Benedicta of the Cross.
